

HARASSING OF JEWS IN AUSTRIA WORST IN MODERN HISTORY

No Pogrom Compares With Driving of Jews From the Country, It Is Said

DECREE IS MADE PUBLIC

Burgenland Must Be Freed of Jews By the Middle of June

PRAGUE, June 17.—No pogrom in modern history has taken place to compare with the driving of the Jews from Austria since the Nazis took power there. Today the Nazi authorities have decreed that Burgenland, bordering Hungary and Czechoslovakia, must be free of Jews by the middle of June.

It is estimated around 3,000 Jews have been deprived of their passports and of all their possessions and somehow slipped illegally over the border or else shoved over by Nazi guards into countries which will expel them by the same means. They have no legal or material basis of existence. They are doomed.

Few outsiders have the opportunity to witness the workings of this decree in the provincial towns and villages of Austria. Nor will many Jews ever abroad ever talk for publication, for fear of bringing retribution on their relatives left behind.

JAPANESE SEEK TO WIN CHINESE CONFIDENCE

But Survey by Correspondent
Finds Growing Hatred On Part of Chinese

CONTROL AREA TAKEN

(This is the third of a series of five articles by John Goette, International News Service North China correspondent, dealing with a 1,000 mile swing made through the provinces of Hopei, Honan and Shansi, to investigate the Japanese military occupation.)

By John Goette
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

TAIYUANFU, SHANSI, China, June 17.—(INS)—"I am very very that the Governor of Taiyuanfu, Colonel Ochiai, is not here to talk with you."

This remark was made to me in a lovely garden of this once model capital of the model province of Shansi. The garden was part of the spacious dwelling of a former official under Governor Yen Hsi-shan, and the speaker was a staff officer under Lieutenant General Shigatsui Yamaoka.

While it is possible that reference to Colonel Ochiai as "governor" may have been a slip in translation, nevertheless it was indicative of the military feeling that the Japanese Chief of the potent Special Mission should be considered in such light.

To the Special Mission, a powerful arm of the Japanese Army, is entrusted the political and administrative affairs in the occupied areas. Some notion of their methods can be seen from the fact that Captain Ando and his assistant in the walled city of Changteh received me dressed in the traditional long gown of China rather than in Japanese military uniform.

This same speaker at Taiyuanfu drew my attention to the alleged enclaves of the Japanese to bring peace to Shansi province. His remarks followed upon a day of visiting the walls and gates of the city, scarred by Japanese six-inch shells, while the gates were mined by Japanese sappers. On the walls I saw the dead bodies of Chinese soldiers shot down at their machine gun sand still unburied.

Formerly there were 200,000 souls in Taiyuanfu, but less than 80,000 remain, with all the important government officials, and substantial citizens of all classes not returned.

Lieutenant-General Shigatsui Yamaoka, ranking officer in Taiyuanfu, received me in a Chinese style compound with endless courtyards and houses, once the home of Governor Yen Hsi-shan. Before getting down to serious talk, the General showed me a Sung vase left behind among other costly curios by the former residents. General Yamaoka, like General Kat-

He Buys Them Two At A Time

By "The Stroller"
Max Slatoft, Bristol's well-known antique dealer, tells me that he always purchases two or three straw hats at a time so that he won't be bothered in buying a new straw headpiece each year. This year he bought two straw hats. One he will wear this year and the other one, he will bring out next year. Thus he will not be compelled to visit his favorite haberdashery for the purpose of buying a straw hat until the spring of 1940.

This report was made at a special session of Council during which a representative of the Freil Engineering Company said that more than 24,000 feet of sewer pipe will be needed. The project may be financed through the non-debt revenue sewer service. Nearly 250 families will be affected by the completion of the proposed sewer extensions.

BLAME CARELESSNESS FOR MANY ACCIDENTS

Middletown Grangers Hold Interesting Discussion At The Canby Home

NAME SEVERAL CAUSES

HULMEVILLE, June 17.—A great many of the accidents on the farm and other places are a direct result of carelessness. This was the fact developed from a general discussion concerning the promotion of safety in the home and on the farm and on the highway. The discussion featured the well-attended meeting of the Middletown Grange, held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Canby, here.

Members responded to roll call by naming things that may be lurking dangers around the farm and in the home, and in this connection poorly illuminated stairways and defective electrical appliances were mentioned the most frequently.

Mrs. J. G. Webster gave a brief talk on the question, "Is Your Home Safe?" She mentioned a number of things around the home that may be responsible for accidents, and among them were rugs on slippery floors, open fire places not properly protected, defective steps or stair rails and poisons in the medicine cabinets. Mrs. Webster said she feels that broken crocks and dishes are particularly dangerous to the housewife and they should be discarded as soon as cracks in them are discovered.

The subject of keeping the farm safe was also considered and in this connection it was said that care should be taken in the handling of the animals and in the operation of machinery. Several members said it is possible to prevent fires by taking the proper precaution and others suggested the erection of lightning rods. Health, it was said, may be safe-guarded by having a pure water supply, by having sanitary sewage conditions and by installing screen for protection against flies and mosquitoes.

Several of the members took up a discussion concerning safety on the highways and they said that the grange can help in this matter by each member having his car in good condition. Following this discussion Elizabeth Ridge gave a reading, "Ten Little Autos."

Mrs. R. Walker Jackson gave a short talk on mosquitoes and their eradication. She spoke of the different types of mosquitoes and their breeding places. She also suggested spraying kerosene around the shrubbery and damp places on the lawn. Mrs. Jackson

GRADUATES TOLD HOW TO SUCCEED IN LIFE

Rev. L. T. Moore, Phila., Advises 50 Receiving Diplomas,
Langhorne-Middletown

MANY AWARDS GIVEN

LANGHORNE, June 17.—"What You Need To Win Tomorrow," was the subject taken up by the Rev. Leon T. Moore, pastor of Calvary Methodist Church, Philadelphia, when he delivered the commencement address last evening, upon the occasion of presentation of diplomas to 50 graduates of Langhorne-Middletown High School.

The exercises were held in the South Langhorne Casino, which was filled for the occasion.

To the young people who are about to start out in life the Rev. Moore said: "You have attained the summit of the second row of foot-hills of life, but the mountains, the real range, happens to be ahead, and some of you might not attain unto the Summit. It is unfortunately true of every class that goes out into life that some fall by the way-side. The road ahead is anything but easy. It is difficult. You are not going into a world that is any too friendly to you. I do not want to paint a dark picture, but we must face the facts. That which seemed indestructible has been destroyed, and the standards we held as being the only possible standards are forgotten or are being cared little about by many."

The two philosophies that are most outstanding in this age were listed by the speaker as: "The world owes me a living," and "I have a life worth living," then he continued by telling of the bright spot found in the indomitable will found in young people at these times, the determination that they are going to play a part in the Tomorrows.

Three suggestions were given to the graduates in order to have a life of successful service:

1. "If you expect to get anywhere that is worth-while in life, you must be happy, and of good disposition. If you don't learn to take it, someone will take it for you. The world is full of sorrow, distress and heart-ache, it needs happiness. I believe it is a commission of God to go out in life and when sorrow comes to give people something to turn their thoughts, even for a moment, from that sorrow."

2. "You must choose a high moral standard, and you must maintain it. And remember this, 'Our choice is all-"

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Copyright, 1933, by The Baltimore Sun)

There Is Only One Way

Washington, June 16.

THE obscurity into which the La Follette National Progressive party, so bravely launched two months ago, now seems to have sunk is such that there is some doubt as to whether it will re-emerge at all. In any event, there appears no chance that it will figure in the fall campaign except in the State of Wisconsin, where it was born.

ASIDE from the fact that establishing a new party on a genuinely national basis is neither simple nor easy, requiring, among other things, much time and money—aside from that, the uncordial reception of the La Follette party by the very people to whom it was natural to think it would most appeal has robbed it of any chance

12-FOOT 'GATOR SHOT BY CROYDON MAN, DISPLAYED

300-Yr.-Old Animal Watched
For Years by Aden Waterman
in Florida

MEASURES TWELVE FEET

CROYDON, June 17.—An alligator, watched daily for years as it disported in Florida waters, has finally been bagged by Aden Waterman, Dixon avenue, Maple Shade, the mount now attracting much attention in the window of the office of Otto Grupp, here.

Waterman, who during his childhood resided in Florida, and his parents also, watched this particular alligator for years. Waterman, who has since become a Maple Shade resident, decided to shoot the big fellow, who measures 12 feet from tip to tip. It was on one of his annual visits to Florida this past winter that Waterman shot the 'gator.

It sank in 12 feet of water, after four shots were fired into the back of its head, and four men were required to work for a half-day to raise the 800-pound bulk to the surface.

After being stuffed and mounted, the alligator was brought to Croydon, where young and old gather daily to see it.

The age of the big fellow is estimated at 300 years, and he still has his original teeth.

The animal was shot in Judge Perkins Lake, Deland, Volusia County, Florida, December 3rd, at a point near where Waterman resided and attended school.

ANNOUNCE CHANGES FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Two Teachers Are Leaving
Faculty With Close of Schools Today

TO OPEN SHOP IN SEPT.

School ended today for 2500 children of Bristol borough public schools. With dismissal came 2½ months' vacation for students and teachers, with plans made by some instructors for special courses at various colleges, others will take short trips, and still others will remain at home for the period.

With the opening of sessions next September some changes will be noted in the schools here, two teachers leaving the faculty, and three new ones to be added.

With the commencement of the 1938-39 term the special classes are all to be housed in Washington street school building, with two more teachers being added for the special classes.

Miss Elizabeth Forsythe, Mt. Airy, who has been teaching in special classes in Jenkintown, has been engaged for one of the local special groups at Washington street. Miss Forsythe is a graduate of the Philadelphia Normal School, Temple University, and Columbia University. An additional teacher will be engaged within the near future, making four special classes in the four rooms at the building.

The instructresses who have been at this building will be assigned to other buildings in the borough. Miss Mary Wilkinson, who has been teaching fifth grade, will be assigned to a sixth grade group at the high school building; Miss Jane Rogers and Miss Clara Beidelman will be transferred to Jefferson avenue school, and Miss Grace Shaver to Bath street.

The third new teacher on Bristol faculty will have charge of shop instruction in the high school. He is Thomas G. Wiley, a graduate of the New York State Normal School at Oswego, N. Y.

There are two faculty members who are leaving this term. Miss Minnie Rodrock, Doylestown Township, an instructress of Bath street school, who is retiring, and Miss Katherine Evans, Torresdale, who will be married in the fall. Miss Evans taught at the high school building.

A number of the teachers plan to take advanced studies this summer, and others are planning trips. One member of the faculty at the high school building, Miss Violet Sperling, in company with relatives, will take a two months' automobile tour of the United States.

MAN SERIOUSLY HURT DIVING IN RIVER; BREAKS HIS NECK

Raymond Nevinger, 24, of 322
Radcliffe St., in Hospital in Critical Condition

RUSHED TO ABINGTON

Tells Physicians He Must Have Taken Too Shallow
A Dive

Diving in shallow water in the Delaware River in the rear of his residence, yesterday afternoon, Raymond Nevinger, 24, of 322 Radcliffe street, suffered a broken neck and lacerations of the scalp ¾ inches long.

Nevinger, who was married last December, had frequently dived from the point where he was bathing yesterday, he informed physicians last evening, and the only explanation he could give of the severe results was that he must have taken a too shallow dive. The tide was also low at the time.

His plight was noted by those on shore, Nevinger becoming stuck in the river bed. Edward McGlynn and Arthur Brooks went to his rescue, and brought the helpless man to shore. Nevinger had no use of his lower limbs, and little use of his arms when placed on the dock.

He was treated by a physician, and later removed to his home, then last evening was taken in the ambulance of the Bucks County Rescue Squad to the Abington Hospital, where X-rays were taken.

Nevinger, who had resided in Bristol for a few years, was wed in December. He and his wife occupied an apartment at 322 Radcliffe street. Mrs. Nevinger has been visiting relatives in Buffalo, N. Y., for the past few weeks, and has been suffering from a nervous breakdown. She was notified of her husband's condition, and informed local residents she would return to Bristol immediately.

The young man was employed by the Hall Aluminum Company as a carpenter. He was to have gone to his duties at four o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Rotarians Meet At The Fleckenstine Home

Bristol Rotarians journeyed yesterday to Newportville to the home of Dr. and Mrs. Horace Fleckenstine for their weekly meeting. It was the first outdoor meeting of the present season, and was in the form of a surprise party, the sons of the members being present.

The Rev. Edwin Boardman, pastor of the McAllister Memorial Presbyterian Church, Torresdale, was the guest speaker. His topic was "The Boy is the Father of the Man." He mentioned three qualifications that every boy should have to live a clean life. They were: a fine faith, a courageous heart; and a vision of hope.

"The father must teach his son how to live right," Rev. Boardman said. "Each of the men should live his life so that his sons will have a better chance than he had."

"The crimes of a child's life cast shadows on the child and also on those who love him and it is up to the parents to see that he has a good start. Boys with Christian parents are not as apt to be found in courts."

A very delightful luncheon was served on the beautiful and spacious lawn of the Fleckenstine residence. Frank Voit, president, was in charge. Among the sons of Bristol Rotary members who were present were the following: William S. Roberts, S. Carman Fleckenstine, Franklin K. Willis, Jr., Richard L. Maddox, Theodore C. L. Wenzel, Otto Grupp, Jr., Thomas K. Jones, Jacob C. Schmidt, Jr., Horace P. Schmidt, and Ernest Gamble, Jr.

The meeting next week will be held at the Elks' Home on Thursday afternoon. The subject for that session will be Astronomy. A number of pictures will be shown.

"ALWAYS WITH ITS MOTHER"

A sentence of more significance than may appear on the surface occurs in J. Edgar Hoover's report on the Cash kidnapping. He says of the criminal:

"He considered three persons to kidnap. First was the son of Charles Chambers, whom he eliminated because the child was always with its mother and could never be seen alone."

For obvious reasons children seldom are or can be kidnapped when with their mothers. Those who through carelessness or a false sense of security have been left to fend for themselves are the ones victimized.

Now, in this era as never before, children are generally separated for more or less extensive periods from their mothers who engage in many varied affairs not directly related to the duties of motherhood. And it is not improbable that their common neglected and defenseless condition, constituting a tacit invitation to those who would do them harm, is a major contributing factor in the growth of this crime which is such a stain upon our times and our country.

Intentionally or not, Mr. Hoover has thrown out a striking suggestion to those who may have been made fearful by the prevalence of kidnapping. Be with your child or very near him most of the time, and he probably will be eliminated from consideration by kidnapers, as was the lucky son of Charles Chambers.

HOT WEATHER ADVICE

Summer being on us, we shall be treated to much sagacious advice on how to withstand the effects of it. Suggest mainly on green vegetables, they will tell us, like cows, which are rarely overcome by heat; and drink plenty of water, like fish, which are immune to prostration; and sleep all we can, because no one ever gets a sunstroke while asleep or, if he does, is happily unaware of it. The best advice of all, however, is to go slow.

Don't be in such a tearing hurry to get things done. Both work and play can still be pursued on another day if you do not collapse before this day ends. Exactly how fast a man should move with the temperature at 97 the doctors have not stated, but we imagine the Arkansas rustic who caught a glimpse of a snail the other day—went it went past him—was keeping within reasonably safe limits.

Have a serene, unexcitable snail for your pace setter. Then your worst injury from heat will probably be a sunburn received when the shade moves faster than you care to follow. That is a trifle compared with having your heart give out because you rashly move faster than the shade.

Motion makes heat. In fact, motion is heat. Heat, says Webster, "is kinetic energy of confused oscillating motions of the particles or molecules of matter." The particles within you will oscillate more or less, whether or no, when the mercury mounts high. But you can keep the whole mass that composes your 200 laboring pounds from moving too rapidly down the baking street and over the sun-blistered golf course.

There's only one explanation when two people don't get along. Getting what they want seems more important than getting along.

Any day now, the Congressman should be back in the home town, where a telegram is important.

"The Stolen God" by EDISON MARSHALL

SYNOPSIS

When Ned Holden stepped from the train at Bangkok, Siam, he looked like an American tourist on his first trip to the Orient. Yet Holden, son of a devoted Yankee mother and a zealous American missionary, had been bred in Asia. Now, a master of Oriental speech and customs, he stood at the top of his strange profession. Officially an ethnologist, his real job is to help maintain the white man's peace over a million square miles of savage country. Back from a dangerous search for an Annamite revolutionary, Holden now plans a three months' holiday. At a tea dance that same afternoon he meets a woman who is Western to the last hair of her amber-colored head. Asking what is to be seen in Bangkok, Holden tells her about the famous Emerald Buddha. Two feet high and carved of solid beryl, it has caused countless wars, changed the course of empires, raised and destroyed royal dynasties.

CHAPTER III

"But how can a little nation like Siam keep such a treasure?" the girl asked.

"The great nations of the world are only too willing. The Emerald Buddha is political dynamite. It's less of a menace here—in a small independent kingdom—than in any other Oriental country. Suppose, for instance, the Annamites should get hold of it. It would instantly waken a wave of religious enthusiasm that would unite all native factions and might sweep their French rulers into the sea. Besides it's the palladium of the royal Siamese dynasty."

"Palladium. I'm afraid I've forgotten that word."

"It's derived from the guardian statue of Pallas, in Troy. You remember—Ulysses had to steal it before the Greeks could conquer the city. The Emerald Buddha is not just the official god; it's the symbol, the good angel of our royal family. Try to understand that. It's an Oriental idea hard for Westerners to grasp. We've had several revolutions lately, but only in the family. No outsider can seize the throne as long as the Emerald Buddha sits on his throne in the temple."

Just then he saw she was no longer listening to him. A brighter light than he had been able to turn on filled her eyes as they lifted to greet two men approaching between the tables. Ned rose. He had come to the first barrier across his newfound trail.

"Daddy," the girl said, addressing the older of the two, "I want to introduce Mr. —" She faltered and flushed.

"Holden," Ned said, extending his hand.

"My name's Griffin," her father told him, giving him a hearty handshake.

Something clicked in Ned's brain. "Not Daniel Griffin, the famous collector?"

"That's me," the shrewd, plain, pleasant face flushed with pleasure. "Here that, Virginia? I'd better not try to get by with anything out here. My reputation has gone ahead of me all the way to Bangkok."

"Your reputation, sir, has gone all over the world," his companion, a young dark man with an esthetic face, corrected quickly.

This was perfectly true. In the last four years the St. Louis millionaire had turned loose a steady stream of gold in Oriental countries, buying ancient art treasures. His private collection was now the finest in America. He was the despair of every museum in the Far East.

But certainly he did not look the part. Ned remembered that he had made his millions out of meat-packing. Fork and Ming porcelain did not seem to go together. He was as thoroughly American as his daughter Virginia.

Now Virginia was speaking again. "And this is Vicome Cham-bon, my fiancé."

Ned's first thought was that among other ancient treasures to lay up for his daughter, Daniel Griffin had bought her a title. But Vicome Cham-bon did not look the purchasable kind. He was a notably handsome youth—slim, dark, and fine—but also he was virile as the rest of his manly race. He had eyes like black diamonds, with strange lights behind them.

"Glad to know you," Ned said. "I am happy to know you, Monsieur." Cham-bon's voice had a deep ring.

"Sit down, all of you," Virginia commanded. "André—Mr. Holden has just been telling me some interesting things about the Emerald Buddha."

Cham-bon stood so very still as to give the effect of a start. "Pardon? Out, the Emerald Buddha! We did not get to see it."

Before Ned could comment, a native bearer called his name. "Telephone, master."

He went to the phone with dis-

"Some friends of mine went there this morning, but couldn't get in. It was only closed today. There's nothing wrong with the temple. But the Emerald Buddha has been stolen."

Ned Holden gave no sign that he had heard, save that the pupils of his eyes contracted to tiny points. He knew the import of this news—no man better—and he rallied to meet it as though it were a physical emergency.

"When did it happen?" "About midnight last night." "Inside or outside job?" "Four men, in masks, evidently natives, stuck up the priests with guns, and bound and gagged them."

Cham-bon stood so still as to give the effect of a start when the Emerald Buddha was mentioned.

tinued misgivings. He had left no forwarding address, and some one had gone to a great deal of effort to trace him here. That alone predicted trouble. And there was a curious haze of premonition in the back of his head. His instincts were all on edge.

"Hello, Ned?" "Yes?" "Do you know who this is?"

Ned did know. It was George Ralston, the American-born minister of finance of the Siamese government. But as this was no guessing game, Ned did not speak his name aloud.

"Hello, Sam," he answered. For the walls had ears and the wires leaked.

"I want to talk to you right away. Get a cab. At my Friday-afternoon office."

George Ralston's Friday-afternoon office was the council chamber at the king's palace. Ned agreed and hung up.

But Ralston's business could wait a moment more. One of Ned's strong points was a keen sense of values. There was always trouble beyond the Mekong, but Virginia Griffin was visiting Bangkok for only one more day.

"I've been called away," he explained, bowing over her hand. "Will you tell me where I can reach you tomorrow? I think possibly I can arrange for you and your party to see the Emerald Buddha, even though the temple is still closed to the public."

"You can call us any time at this hotel. If nothing else develops, come and have tea with us at this hour tomorrow."

Twenty minutes later Ned was being ushered into the royal palace. He was taken at once to the council chamber. George Ralston rose to greet him from beside a great teak-wood table. And Ned stared wide-eyed at his white face.

"What's happened?" he demanded.

"I suppose you've heard that the Temple of the Emerald Buddha is closed for repairs?"

"Any suspects? Any theories?" "Nothing but. Not a grain of direct evidence."

"How many people knew it?" "On this point alone might hang peace or war."

"Only the temple priests, half a dozen of the king's ministers, and ourselves," Ralston's voice was trembling.

"The priests are safe. I'm not sure about the ministers. If there's a disloyal one in the lot, now's his chance."

"We've got to risk it, anyway."

"If no one tells—and no one guesses—how long can you keep the news from the public?" Ned asked.

"Until the winter festival, six weeks from now?"

"That's what we're praying for. His Majesty will implore his people to be patient, while important repairs are being made in the temple. With utmost care and a lot of luck, we may put it over. But in six weeks good Buddhists from all over the Orient will gather to see the Emerald Buddha put on his winter garments. And if we can't produce him—"

"I know. But perhaps we can rig up a substitute to fool the people and give us more time."

Ralston shook his head. "You remember that the king is the Defender of the Faith. He'd rather lose his crown than foist a counterfeit Emerald Buddha on his subjects."

"Six weeks," Ned's eyes shone like a hunting leopard's. "He may show up anywhere before then, with a roar of cannon. If that happens, you'll be sorry you didn't take the Siamese people into your confidence." For Ned was thinking cold and sure.

Ralston shook his head wearily. "We discussed it. But you know the strength of the revolutionary party. If they as much as suspect the Buddha is missing, they'll act—and it won't be bloodless revolution like we had last year."

The Story of OD and AD

and the 2 STORES

OD and AD wanted to go into business for themselves. They decided to open retail stores. But they had different ideas as to how they should get customers. This is the story of what happened.

How OD and AD Opened their Stores

OD believed that the way to get customers was to sell at low prices, and that the way to sell at low prices was to keep his expenses down. So he spent as little as possible in fixing up his store. He said he was not going to "waste" money on "trick lighting" and a "fancy front." He bought large quantities of a few lines of merchandise, because that way he got them cheaper.

Then he put an assortment of his goods into the windows, but because he had done so little to make his store attractive, few people noticed that it was a new store, and few came in to buy.

AD decided that the first thing he must do was to make his store attractive to customers. So he had it painted throughout in cheerful colors. He completely changed the windows and front, and he put in fixtures that flooded the whole store with light.

He chose merchandise well-known by name to the public, and bought smaller quantities of many lines, thus giving customers a greater selection. He arranged his stock in the store to make shopping convenient. He put in window displays of his most interesting merchandise—and changed them frequently.

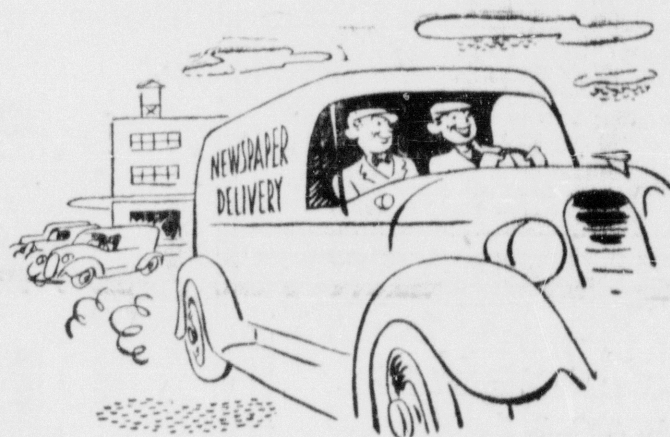

Because his windows and his store were so attractive, many people stopped to look, and enough people came in to buy so that AD's goods sold quickly, and he was soon ordering more of many items.

How OD and AD went after Customers

OD soon found that he could not get the customers he needed from those who passed by his store. So he had circulars printed and hired boys to distribute them from house to house. Sometimes they put them under the door or into the mail box, but often they threw them on the porch or into the yard, and many were blown away. Also, OD found it was a slow and costly way to tell his story, as in a whole day a boy could cover only a few hundred homes.

OD was disappointed to find that after all this work and expense, only a few more people came to his store.

AD decided that the more people he could tell about his merchandise, the more people would come to his store. So he put advertisements into newspapers read by many thousands of people every day. He knew that people were eager to get their newspapers to read the news. Therefore, his advertising was more likely to be seen in a paper people wanted to read. Also, the newspapers were delivered all over the city as soon as they were printed.

AD found that the more he advertised, the more people came to his store and the more goods he sold and the less it cost him to handle each sale. So he passed on the greater part of these savings in lower prices and better values to all his customers.

How OD Failed and AD Succeeded

OD found that so few people came to his store that his goods moved very slowly. He could buy very little new stock because his money was tied up. So he decided to have a sale.

He had big signs painted for the front of his store. He had circulars printed and sent boys out to put them into parked cars and distribute them at homes. But the people who came saw so little they wanted that his sale was a failure. At last, he disposed of all his remaining stock to an out-of-town bargain store at less than half what he had paid for it.

OD had had a very unhappy experience, but because he had never advertised in the newspapers, few people in all the city ever knew that his store had opened or that it had closed.

AD found that with more and more people now coming to his store, his stocks moved very quickly. As a result, he was constantly able to have fresh, new merchandise for his customers. He concluded that since people bought newspapers to read the news, he should tell them the news about his merchandise and his store. As a result, AD's advertisements were read as eagerly as any other part of the newspaper. Soon every one in town knew that AD had the newest things.

AD did not make exaggerated statements in his advertising. He just made the truth interesting. Repeatedly AD had to enlarge his store, and employ more people to take care of his increasing business. And, although his expenses were now very much greater, he sold so much merchandise and turned his stocks so rapidly that his store was very successful and was known far and wide for the values it gave its customers.

AD Tells OD How Advertising Serves the Store and Its Customers

ONE DAY OD came to AD and applied for a position. He asked AD how he had built such a fine business and obtained so many customers.

AD said, "First, by making the store an attractive and convenient place to shop, and second, by having the merchandise customers want.

"But these are not sufficient without Advertising to tell the people about them. So we continuously publish interesting, informative, truthful news about our service and our merchandise. And we tell it in the way that reaches the largest possible number of people quickly—through newspaper advertising."

Japanese Seek To Win Chinese Confidence

suki at Shihchiachwang, impressed upon me the fact that the Japanese army was trying to win the people and the still recalcitrant Chinese armed hands to see the policy of Japan rather than to continue present "mopping up" operations except as a last resort.

General Yamaoka stressed the Japanese charges that Governor Yen Hsi-shan had turned over to the Chinese Reds, although later in the day I was shown the ring of sturdy brick stockades about the city walls which Governor Yen had constructed to keep out the Reds only two years previously.

General Yamaoka expressed the belief that Governor Yen, who was still somewhere in Shansi province, was anxious to join the Japanese. However, he believed, or at least professed, that the Shansi people were better off under the "friendly" Japanese army than under Yen Hsi-shan who had sold them out to the Reds.

All Japanese high officials stress their plan as trying to win the confidence of what responsible Chinese are left in the occupied areas, and through them organizing administrative organs. Provisions of food and free seeds is another factor to which the Japanese invariably refer.

I talked with Chinese chauffeurs of Japanese military cars, American missionaries, European businessmen, and Chinese of many walks of life, including police working under the Japanese. All are open in their black picture of Japanese efforts thus far to bring the peace which the Japanese so glibly talk about.

In a long established Chinese primary school at Shihchiachwang, tiny tots were paraded before me, and their text books, revised in Japanese fashion, shown me. As I left, the Chinese children bowed in Japanese style and bid me farewell with the Japanese "sayonara" instead of their own "tsai ch'ien." Such insignificant acts tell their own gloomy story.

In the next Article John Goette will deal with the economic and every day life in the Japanese occupied areas.

The Great Game of Politics

vehemently than they. No one ever felt greater concern for the oppressed farmer, the ill-treated laborer and the under-privileged generally. In fact, they were—and their father before them—campaigning along these lines years before Mr. Roosevelt ever thought of them. No name has meant more to the out-and-out, unequivocal, successful "Liberal" than that of La Follette.

YET, when the La Follettes issued the well-known "clarion call," instead of responding with shouts of delight, the professional liberals withered the movement with their scorn, denounced its leaders and impugned their motives. One recognized spokesman of national reputation likened Governor La Follette to Hitler. Another accused him—a La Follette of all people—of selling out to the interests. Others asserted that he was lending comfort to the enemy, willing to betray the "liberal cause" to reelect himself Governor. The Communist party in its recent convention openly repudiated the La Follettes and declared its continued adherence to Mr. Roosevelt and the New Deal.

THE reasons for the extraordinary unanimity with which the radicals turned upon the La Follette movement are very simple. Analysis of any of the denunciations will disclose them. The offensive fact was that, despite its cloudy platitudes, inseparable from such pronouncements, the La Follette platform had in it too much common sense and too little demagoguery. The sentence which aroused most resentment was this one: "We flatly oppose any form of coddling or spoon feeding the American people, whether it be those on relief, whether it be the farmers or the workers, or whether it be business and industry." To the ordinary man, that, coupled as it was with pledges to care for the distressed unemployed and an insistence upon restoring business health, would seem fairly sound. To the radicals it appeared a "gross betrayal of the cause," a "species of Hitlerism," brutal and callous.

OF COURSE, these denunciations were silly, but they are none the less illuminating. Better than anything else they demonstrate the true reason for the almost solid radical support which Mr. Roosevelt still commands and which is constantly urging him toward greater spoon feeding until today some form of Federal largess is being distributed to more than 20,000,000 people and the Federal finances are in a shockingly confused condition. The radicals of the country oppose the La Follette movement because, though the La Follettes do not want to stop spending, they do want to stop paying people not to work; they do want them to stand again on their own feet instead of lolling in the lap of the Government, and they do want to broaden the tax base so that some semblance of solvency may be restored.

HOWEVER unsound other La Follette proposals may be—and some of them are very unsound. Indeed—these suggestions of ending spoon feeding, making people work and paying as you go are terribly offensive to the true radicals. They vastly prefer the Roosevelt policy of pouring the money out and holding to the fiction that the rich pay the bill and the poor get the free ride. Perhaps, the next time the La Follettes launch a party they will have learned that the way to secure support of the "true liberals" is to eliminate from their proclamations every trace of common sense, to disregard the elemental economic facts, ignore the teachings of history and go one hundred per cent. demagoguery. That's the only way.

ON SCREENS IN BRISTOL

BRISTOL

"I Was A Spy," the story of the heroic young Belgian woman, Martha McKenna, wife of a British officer, who was a hospital nurse during the war and engaged in secret service work for the Allies, opens today at the Bristol Theatre.

The war time adventures of Martha McKenna are said to make one of the most thrilling stories of heroism that has yet been adapted to the screen. A spy and a sister of mercy, Martha McKenna spent two years of her life looking after the German wounded in Belgium and conveyed military secrets to Germany's enemies.

Finally her activities were discovered; she was court-martialed and condemned to be shot. But on account of her service to Germany the sentence was commuted to one of imprisonment for life. That sentence she fully expected to serve, but the defeat of Germany opened the prison gates to her release.

GRAND

To get 450 Chinese, 150 cowboys, 40 animal trainers, 200 technicians, three elephants, five camels, four leopards, two eagles, six vultures, 22 donkeys, 15 goats, 10 dogs and several thousand tons of equipment to a motion picture location is a task requiring the skilled co-ordination of an army staff headquarters.

That the task was performed with neatness and dispatch for spectacular outdoor action of "The Adventures of Marco Polo," which stars Gary Cooper at the Grand Theatre today is a tribute to the efficiency of Samuel Goldwyn's studio organization and the field generalship of the round and genial director, Archie Mayo.

Locale of the "Marco Polo" location was a sun-browned valley nestled among the lower ranges of the Malibu mountains, 35 miles from Hollywood. There technicians had created a section of the Great Wall of ancient China and reconstructed the main gate of Peking as it was in the days of the western world's first travelling salesman.

The behind-the-scenes operations that brought the location army to "Peking," made up and ready to work at nine o'clock, were obligingly sketched by Percy Ikerd, one of Director Archie Mayo's assistants.

WOOL-TWISTERS WIN FIRST GAME IN FOURTEEN

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE

GRUNDY'S—SUPERIOR
(Leaden's field)
Umpire, Fraul; scorer, Tomlinson
ODD FELLOWS—ROHM & HAAS
(Maple Beach field)
Umpire, DeLa; scorer, Juno

Springing the surprise of the season, the Grundy ball team won their first game in fourteen starts by nailing out the Rohm and Haas nine, 3-2, last evening on the former's diamond. The defeat dropped the chemical workers into third place and assured the St. Ann's team of at least a first-half tie.

The second surprise of the night was the relief pitching of Tony DiBlassio. This youth played erratic ball at shortstop all year for the Grundy team. Last night when it appeared that Antonelli was going bad, Acting-Manager Snyder put in DiBlassio to pitch.

And what a job the erstwhile shortstop did. He allowed a run in the second but from then on he was invincible. So invincible that he limited the Maple Beach team to five hits and despite the fact that he was in trouble on several occasions, kept them away from the plate.

Another stand-out in the Grundy victory was Wilbur Van Lente's stop and throw of Cahill's grounder in the second. VanLente ran close to second base to nip the batter's daisy-cutter and by a fast throw got the runner at first.

The losing twirler was Eddie Jeffries who left the premises in the fourth to be relieved by the former Bristol High School star, Reds Gallagher. The first batter to face Gallagher got a single but from then on there was no sign of a hit.

But the damage had been done before the red-headed hurler stepped to the mound. Baurth had opened with a single past third base. DeBlassio scored Baurth with a long double. DiTanna scored DiBlassio with a hit. DiTanna advanced on an error. VanLente rolled out, G. Ritter to Cahill. On Antonelli's fly to left, DiTanna counted. Mondo hit safely and so did Moss but Monachello grounded out, ending the frame.

The chemical workers counted their first run in the initial frame. After Brunner grounded out, Cahill worked Antonelli for a pass. Dougherty singled and Massilla did likewise, the latter's hit registering Cahill. In the second, another marker was checked up. Ritter was given a free pass to first. W. Ritter sacrificed the runner to second. Jeffries rolled out but Brunner delivered a safety to left, and G. Ritter counted.

CAREY ALLOWS 4 HITS; LANDRETHS WIN, 11 TO 3

With Al Carey pitching and allowing the visiting Johnson's Colored Stars, of Atlantic City, four hits, and the home team hitting the horse-hide to all parts of the field, the Landreth Seeds easily won their twilight game at Landreth Ball Park last night, 11-3. Leading the bombardment for Landreth, Claude Lodge made four hits, one a home-run, and drove in five runs. Camel Breslin registered three hits, one for a triple; and Vic Rockhill, four singles.

Turner, the "Stars" first base guardian, was the only visitor who could solve the left-hand slants of Carey. His three-base drive and homer scored all the visitors' runs.

Rockhill featured with sensational fielding.

"DAVE" LANDRETH SORRY ABOUT LAST NIGHT'S GAME

"I am extremely sorry," said Dave Landreth, manager of Landreth Seeds baseball team, last night, when he saw what a poor showing the Johnson's Stars, a colored visiting team, was making against the local nine.

"Dave" then made it plain that he booked what was reputed to be a very strong team, but that the team made a very poor showing and the crowd was greatly disappointed.

Today Mr. Landreth announced that he had booked the House of David nine for next Thursday night. "I have cancelled the game I had booked with the West Philadelphia team of the Main Line League for next Thursday night. Last night I telephoned to New York and made arrangements for the House of David team to play here instead. The game will start at 6.15 and the public can rest assured that the game will be a good one."

EXCELSIOR NINE WINS FROM NEWTOWN, 6 TO 4

The strong Bristol Excelsiors traveled to Newtown last night and defeated the Newtown Giants by a score of 6 to 4, in a Colored League game, before 300 fans.

The X's drew first blood in the third inning when they got to Driver, former Newtown high school twirler, for a walk, followed by three straight hits, a fielder's choice and then a double by Walt Long, standing good for three runs.

Eddie Thompson in the meantime pitched very effectively the first three innings, not a man reaching first base, but in the fourth, with two men out, the Giants found Thompson's offerings for three runs.

The X's came back in the fifth and continued working on Driver and accounted two more tallies, with which they won the ball game.

Elijah Bragg was called on to hold the opposition down for the last two innings, and did so in fine fashion, although the Giants did touch him for one run, but this was not enough to win the game for them.

SEVEN ST. ANN'S PLAYERS BATTING OVER .300 MARK

By T. M. Juno

One important reason why the St. Ann's A. A. team is leading the first half chase of the Bristol Twilight League is the fact that seven of their players are batting over the .300 mark. Another is that "Mike" DeRisi, their star moundman, has won five games without a defeat.

"Gige" Dougherty has scored the most runs while a team-mate, Charlie Ihrig, is second. Dougherty is in a deadlock for leadership in stolen bases and the most number of two-base hits. In home runs, St. Ann's is tied with the Odd Fellows with two each.

For the first time this season, the batting leadership has changed. By virtue of getting two hits in three trips at the plate last week, "Jimmy" Massilla, short-stopper for the Rohm & Haas team, replaced Pete Choma, St. Ann's. Choma took a drop, "Joie" Heftman going into second place, and Watson climbing to third. Several other players dropped out of the selected class. The leaders:

BATTING: "Jimmy" Massilla, Rohm & Haas, .478; Joie Heftman, St. Ann's, .435; "Ike" Watson, Odd Fellows, .422.

LUCKY TRAIN WATCHER

HOOSICK FALLS, N. Y.—(INS)—Attention, strange as it may seem! Wallace E. Neuschwander of Hoosick Falls was playing in a six-handed pinocchio game at his home, in which two decks of cards were used, when he received the bid and laid down a run in hearts and one hundred aces.

His partners, Arthur J. Hoffman and Mrs. Wilhelmina Kiernan, also laid down runs in hearts.

Opposing the lucky trio were Mrs. Neuschwander, Mrs. Hoffman and Mrs. Louise Baker.

LEIGHTON LIKES TO FIGHT THE GOOD ONE

"The better they are, the more I like to fight them." That is a statement from William "Hokey" Leighton, Crofton youth, who fights under the colors of the Bucks County Rescue Squad. Leighton has been appearing weekly at the amateur boxing shows being sponsored by the St. Ann's Athletic Association.

The Croftonite has never refused to fight any one and has one of the proudest records of any youth in the amateurs today. Hokey had two streaks of wins, running up nine the first time and seven the second. Philadelphia boxers are seeking to avoid the Rescue Squad mittman now.

Two weeks ago, Leighton fought Rocco Piccinini, Pen-Mar. Piccinini was the alternate to the team that the Eastern district of the A. A. U. sent to Boston. Only Tony Sarullo, Seymour, was better than Piccinini. Now that Sarullo has turned pro, Piccinini takes the number one ranking. Hokey put up a whale of a battle against the Pen-Mar fighter and only the fact that he was floored in the last round prevented him from winning.

Last Monday night, John Diodati, who was booked to fight Eddie Brown, Lambertville, failed to put in an appearance. Quickly Leighton seized the opportunity and agreed to go on with Brown. The Lambertville glover had come here with a reputation, having fought the best in New Jersey. But he found a tartar in Leighton, and the result was that Hokey's dancing and aggressiveness so completely baffled the Jerseyite that he was beaten.

Leighton's next foe has not been signed as yet but Matchmaker Strafe is certain that he will dig up the best to go on with the Crofton boy. There may even be a possibility that Leighton will be rematched with Piccinini, and if he does there certainly will be fireworks.

The fans who have been following the outdoor glove sport, have been amazed at the excellent shows that are being booked through Strafe and the Middle Atlantic district of the A. A. U. Thus far, there has not been one unevenly matched bout and all on the cards have been good enough to make a wind-up on any card.

Strafe is expecting to book another thrilling eight-bout show and will complete arrangements tonight at a meeting of the Middle Atlantic district of the A. A. U.

Tickets for the show next Monday night will go on sale tonight, and can be secured by phoning the St. Ann's club-house, 9934.
